Mrs. Moses Davis, who has been invalid for twelve years at Brookport, died yesterday after a serious illness of a year. BUILD FISHING WAGON
DURING SPARE MOMENTS.

Next summer the firemen will have an opportunity for a pleasant fishing trip. Captain John Slaughter, of the No. 3 station, has secured the running gear of a wagon, and he and his fire fighters are busy during spare hours building a fishing wagon. The wagon will be 7 feet long and 3½ feet wide. The wagon will have a canopy top so that it may be utilized for sleeping quarters. Accommodations will be built for fishing tackle and camping apparatus. The wagon will be for any of the firemen who may want to enjoy a fishing trip next summer while on their vacations. Captain Slaughter and his firemen are good wagon builders and it will be a neat job when completed.

Flood Carries Destruction and Death Through Valleys of South Carolina--It Is Worst in Years

Continuous Rains Cause the Streams to Swell into Torrents and Millions of Dollars and Scores of Lives Lost.

BULLETIN.

Atlanta, Aug. 26.—A report from Augusta says a huge dam above that city burst and many lives were lost. An enormous loss report from brokers' wires and other communications are gone.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 26.—The worst flood since 1843 prevails. At least forty are dead and millions of dollars worth of property destroyed. At Camden the toll bridge washed away, drowning nineteen, who were watching the flood. Cotton mills near Spartanburg are threatened. Heavy rains, lasting several days, caused the flood.

The Savannah.

Augusta, Ga., Aug. 26.—The Savannah river registered 36 feet and rising nearly a foot an hour. The middle of the city is flooded, cotton mills are closed down and railroad traffic hampered. Communication from Charleston and Columbia is stopped. The crest is expected tonight. The Athens gas and electric plants are flooded and the supply is cut off. Two bridges are tottering. Boys flagged a Southern passenger train in nick of time to prevent its going through an undermined trestle.

Barbecue at Ceredo.

A big barbecue will be held tomorrow at Ceredo, in John Bugs' grove. A large number of people from Paducah are contemplating taking in the good time. The party from here will leave on the 9:30 o'clock train and go to Kevil and from there they will go in wagons to the grove.

Amended Articles.

Amended articles of incorporation were filed today by the F. W. Katterjohn Construction company. The only change made in the articles is in the manner of managing the affairs of the company, the management being placed in the hands of a board of three directors instead of by the president, vice-president and secretary, as heretofore.

Springfield Quiet.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 26.—The last soldiers are withdrawn and the city is normal. Civil authorities are confident there will be no trouble. More indictments are expected to night.

LABOR PLANS ARE RAPIDLY MATURING FOR ANNUAL OUTING AT MAXON MILLS

Baseball Games and Contests of All Kinds to be Provided
—St. Louis Unions Making Inquiries.

Pins for an appropriate celebration of Labor Day by the Central Labor Union and the Farmers' Union at Maxon's Mills have been about completed. Several new contests will be held, and handsome prizes awarded. A contest between the county church choirs will be held, and to the best songbirds a handsome prize will be given.

WEATHER.

The committee has made an inspection trip to the grove, and has pronounced it ideal. The trains will run to Paducah every hour, and good service will be given. The officials are figuring on giving a parade of some kind at the picnic grounds, as spectators would not feel it was like Labor Day without a parade. Word has been received from the St. Louis Unions that a large crowd will come on the special excursion, and inquiries about what accommodations would be furnished.

The committee has written that typical Kentucky hospitality will be extended to the visiting brotherhood from Missouri.

BEATS SOUL MATE AND GOES TO JAIL TO AWAIT TRIAL

ACT OF THIEVES.
Ferdinand Earle's Tristan and Isolde Love Affair in Police Court.

Artist Who Put Aside Wife and Son, Common Fellow.

END OF PECULIAR ROMANCE

New York, Aug. 26.—The most celebrated soul mating romance of modern times—that of Ferdinand Pinney Earle, the artist, and Julia Kuttner, the settlement worker—fell clumsily into the sordid and ordinary police court class when Earle was arrested on charge of beating his "affinity," the present Mrs. Earle, and was locked in the Gotham jail.

Earle, with tears in his eyes, pleaded guilty in court to the charge brought against him. He offered no word of explanation or no justification of his cruel treatment of his wife, his soul mate and affinity. He refused to even make an effort to obtain bail and went to jail to await the action of the grand jury, which meets in October.

Sheriff Bryant and posse while squirrel hunting. Earle has been in hiding in the Pea Ridge section. Earle tried to shoot Bryant, but the sheriff fired first.

Paducah Sales.

Thirty hogsheads of association tobacco were sold yesterday by Salesman Veale, of the Paducah market to W. W. Williams, who represents a factory at Richmond, Va. The tobacco sold was all lugs and brought prices ranging from 7 to 9 cents. Mr. Williams came to Paducah from the Burley districts, where he made a large purchase from the Society of Equity.

KAUFMAN WHIPS FLYNN.

PUNISHED HIM Badly in Eighth Round and Knocked Him Out.

Los Angeles, Aug. 26.—Al Kaufman knocked out Jim Flynn in the ninth round tonight in the closing minute of the eighth. Kaufman floored Flynn for the first time during the battle with a right and left to the jaw. Flynn regaled before the count, and Kaufman floored him a second time. The bell saved Flynn and his seconds dragged him helpless to his corner. They restored him sufficiently to answer the bell in the ninth but Kaufman knocked the Colorado pugilist completely out.

STATE'S ATTORNEY

SAYS HAINS TRIES TO STIR UP ARMY

New York, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Prosecutor Darrin has issued a long statement outlining his course in the Hains trial. He denounces the story that Ann's boasted frequently of his conquest of Mrs. Hains and threatened to kill her husband, and declared all army women are easy victims. He declares the scheme is to inflame army officers and keep them from telling what they know about Hains. Ann's insists that Hains is not insane, but merely frightened over the possible consequences of the killing.

City Accepts Streets

The board of public works inspected and accepted the sidewalks and curbing on Broadway and Jefferson street between Ninth and Eleventh streets and the grading and graveling on Clark street between Tenth and Eleventh streets. Contractor H. M. Welkel filed his maintenance bond this afternoon.

After his first wife went to Paris last fall and secured a divorce in the court of first instance, Earle and Julia Kuttner also went abroad and when they returned to this country in April it was announced that they had been married. They have since been living at Seminary, the country home of Earle near Monroe. The home was born on August 4.

Ferdinand Pinney Earle put his first wife away, a French woman, almost exactly a year ago. He was acting on his convictions in the matter, he said. "Conditions over which we have lost all control have made it better that we should be apart," he said.

Accordingly it was agreed between them that they should part, and she sailed with the children in the early part of April.

Bidding his wife God-speed at the American-Holland pier, Earle returned to the afflity, Miss Kuttner, who had been staying as a guest in the Earle home for a fortnight or more before the departure of Mrs. Earle.

Earle declared when he discovered his "twin soul" and put away his wife and young son, in order that they might not interfere with the train of his remarkable romance, that he had received the unforgettable. Tristan and Isolde love stories.

This afternoon Shaw is conscious at times, but the doctors have not found the fracture of the skull. The physicians state that the fall may have fractured the skull at the base. Dr. Van J. Davis made a close examination of the lad and he found that the skull had been cut by the glass, but failed to find a fracture. Shaw is unconscious most of the time and has failed to give an account of how he fell through the skylight.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Mrs. Freeman Vigorous at 114.

In an interview with Mrs. Campbell, who lives at Red Bank, Pa., and who is the daughter of Mrs. Freeman (114 years of age), she stated: "My mother has been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and is anxious to have me tell you that she felt its strengthening effects at once. We know that it has done her a great deal of good. She is 114 years of age and needs something to sustain her strength. She thinks it is a great stimulant and no old person should be without it. I, myself, know what she says about your medicine is the truth."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey kills the disease germs and keeps the system in a normal, healthy condition. It keeps the old young, the young strong; it is invaluable as a tonic for overworked men, delicate women, and sickly children. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture, its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

If weak and run down, take a tea-spoonful four times a day in half a glass of milk or water.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold throughout the world by druggists, grocers and dealers, or shipped direct for $1.00 per bottle.

If in need of advice, write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, New York, stating your case fully. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a handsome illustrated, medical booklet containing some of the many thousands of gratifying letters received from men and women in all walks of life, both old and young, who have been cured and benefited by the use of the World's greatest medicine.

LAWYERS OPENED ANNUAL SESSION

Seattle Welcomes Members of the American Bar.

Was One of the Opening Features—
Association of American Law
Schools Meeting.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 26.—The American Bar association in annual session here heard the annual address by President J. M. Dickinson. Mr. Dickinson spoke in part as follows:

President Dickinson after a few introductory remarks entered upon a discussion of the legislative situation so far as it relates to the enactment of new laws, in the various states of the union. He said:

"The voices of legislation engaged the attention and were the principal theme of many of my predecessors. The trouble is inherent in the nature of our institutions. With the conditions as they exist the evil is incurable. While youth, inexperience and ignorance constitute no legal bar to political preferment, while manhood suffrage is the source of all governmental power, while so many of those most capable of ruling prefer selfishly their personal pleasures and private interests to the general welfare, so long will we suffer the maximum of burdens that come from unwise and unskilled legislation. The best that we can hope to accomplish is to bring about, as we have been doing with marked success, the enactment of uniform legislation in the several states. Our work will in the main be constructive. We can accomplish practically nothing in the way of restraint.

Courts Barely Agree.

Much receipt of legislation of doubtful constitutionality, congressional and state, has been practically enforced by provisions for minority, heavy and cumulative fines and imprisonment, devised in some cases expressly for the purpose of preventing a resort to the courts for relief. When the highest courts of the land, not exceptionally, but with a frequency that almost makes it normal, divide on constitutional questions often determining the result by a bare majority, a lawyer will rarely, especially when the question is new, advise a client to pursue a cause, which, by subjecting him to the possibility of paying cumulative daily fines, and no imprisonment, may deter him.

Courts Not Respected.

For a long time, prior to recent years, judgments of courts, especially those of final resort, were received with the greatest respect. There was in the minds of the American people a profound regard for the judicial department of government. In various ways in recent times, and from sources too influential with public opinion to be ignored, the very foundations have been assailed upon which the stability of the courts rests. Judicial judgments are not accorded the same reception as formerly. Individual judges should be assailed if they are corrupt, or incompetent. It is no assault upon the institution to attack them for such causes in a proper way. While impeachment should not be lightly invoked, yet it is an indispensable safeguard. The impeachment of judges properly pursued, would not undermine the confidence in the institution any more than would unfrocking a priest destroy reverence for the priesthood. Not a court, but the courts are frequently and fiercely attacked. Political parties of all creeds have bowed their heads in recognition of a disconcert, which is not general, but bears the appearance of potentiality. All of this tends to destroy confidence in the courts and to make a subservient judiciary. The people have been led away from the principle that the independence of the judiciary is one of the mainstays of civil liberty under self-government, which is based on mutual self-restraint, and the belief that it is no less important than the principle of representation itself.

Where the Blame Lies.

"Perhaps the judges are not altogether free from blame. When in the decision of cases of great public importance, upon which the attention of the whole country is centered, they assail opposing opinions as subversive or the constitution and fraught with direct evils for the future of the country, it is not surprising if such reiteration will in time undermine the public confidence in at least the wisdom of the courts.

The prevailing winds in the winter being from the north, the sand is blown south; in summer, it is blown the other way, but the winter winds being stronger, the land is gradually working south. Monomoy at the lower end used to be an island, its extremity being called Cape Malabar, a name not used now. Why, I cannot say. Cape Cod itself is sand, and like everything of a desert nature is nomadic. Like the Arab, it is always silently stealing away, so that the appearance of the peninsula constantly changes. The prevailing winds in the winter being from the north, the sand is blown south; in summer, it is blown the other way, but the winter winds being stronger, the land is gradually working south. Monomoy at the lower end used to be an island, its extremity being called Cape Malabar, a name not used now. Why, I cannot say. This island of Monomoy is rapidly growing toward Nantucket, it having advanced some five miles in the last fifty years.—Outing Magazine for August.

Venezuelans themselves are involved in the plan.

After investigation those planning the revolution have ascertained that there are many people in Venezuela, and especially along the Colombia border, who are hostile to President Castro. These people claim they are held in allegiance to him by fear, but upon assurances that a powerful movement is coming to their aid they will be found ready to assist. In final plans for the campaign and detailed information which will be necessary will come from these Venezuelans.

Work is Divided.

Colombia will willingly help by providing men who are as anxious to overthrow Castro as some of the Venezuelans themselves. From Venezuela and Colombia will be drawn the men who are to do the fighting, while the United States will provide the money and several leaders, leaving Holland to carry out the naval part of the program.

What Unitarianism Is.

"Unitarianism means Liberalism. Mr. Taft is a Unitarian. Unitarians believe in one God. They believe He is the father of the universe. They believe that God is love. They believe man has been endowed with reasoning faculties and that reasoning faculty is as divine as the faculty of faith. Unitarianism stands for rationalism, science and common sense in religion. As to Jesus, every man in the Unitarian church is left that question to decide for himself.

"I believe him to be a great prophet—a leader. We believe, like Lincoln, who said his church should have over its door, 'Love to God and love to man.' Let us attack no man's, but respect the religion of all men."

Dr. Caldwell mentioned Emerson, Lowell, Holmes, Bryant, Longfellow, Cooper, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Dr. Edward Everett Hale and a score of other famous Americans, who held the same religious faith as Mr. Taft. At the conclusion of his address he was cheered.

Big Capital is Ready.

"There is no lack of money in this revolution, which cannot in any way be compared with recent revolutionary movements in South or Central America. This revolution will have the moral support of the United States, Holland and other countries behind it. It will have tremendous capital to draw on, will be carried out in the most systematic manner, and will, I think, undoubtedly end in President Castro paying the penalty for his attitude toward the United States and other contracts."

"It is the means which the state department and Holland have agreed upon as the most efficient to make their influence felt by the present Venezuelan ruler."

Thought They Were Thin.

Two men were discussing the trouble in India, and each had a deal to say about his notion of Hindu character. "They're such a belligerent set of people," said one. "Indeed!" exclaimed the other in surprise. "I was under the impression that they were very spare men."

Ask yourself this question: "Do I expect of my friends more than I am willing to give?"

TAFT'S RELIGION*Dean of Ryder Divinity School Answers Attack.

Attempt to Distort Views for Political Effect is Condemned.

HIS ADDRESS AT LA PLATA

La Plata, Mo., Aug. 26.—Dr. J. W. Caldwell, dean of Ryder Divinity school, Lombard college, Galesburg, Ill., who is a personal friend of both Taft and Bryan, addressed a large congregation at the Universalist church here on the subject, "The Religion of Mr. Taft." The address was non-partisan. He said:

"There are a few preachers and so-called religious editors who are weak enough to attack a man's religious views in order to hurt his political prospects. I know and admire both Taft and Bryan, but I want to say I think more of Taft's religion than I do of Bryan's."

"I am almost ashamed to call myself a preacher when I see some things preachers are doing. Don't these critics of another man's religion know what they are doing is contrary to the spirit of American institutions, to the Declaration of Independence and to the constitution. No man has a right to attack that liberty of conscience guaranteed him by the constitution. Wherever that has been done there has been revolt, persecution and bloodshed. Your forefathers realized the menace in a union of church and state and wisely provided against it.

Daily Thought.

Thinking bitterly of others strikes a blow at my own heart.

BRYAN ON THE TRUSTS.

The Sun published Bryan's Indianapolis speech on the subject of "Trusts," and sincerely hopes, that every voter read it carefully and scrutinizingly; for, while in Taft we have a tried and tested executive, belonging to a party that has been in power more than forty years, and part of an administration, whose policies he promises to carry out, in Mr. Bryan we have a man, seeking to supersede that administration with other policies—an untried man, who proposes specific remedies for evils he himself defines.

The Sun undertakes today to criticize Bryan's position on the trust question. Bryan may be right and The Sun wrong; but our purpose is honest and our mind seeking the truth. Whether or not we have attained to it, our reasoning will show.

We remember how Bryan said in his Des Moines speech that he favors putting on the free list every article sold in foreign countries cheaper than in the United States, and taking the tariff off all trust made articles. In order to make that policy effective, of course, the power to remove and replace the tariff necessarily would be reposed in the executive, lest articles sold at a uniform price when the Bryan schedules were adopted afterward might be sold for less abroad, and trusts might be organized afterwards; for Mr. Bryan would not wish to be calling a special session of congress to revise the tariff or foreign underwriting. But a free trader might ask why doesn't he put everything on the free list, anyway?

THE ATTITUDE OF THE LEADERS

Now he comes directly to the question of trusts, and he utterly condemns the very name of them, while he confuses the definition. First, let us understand the attitude of the leaders of the two parties on the subject. Mr. Bryan quotes Mr. Taft: "The combination of capital in large plants to manufacture goods with the greatest economy is just as necessary as the assembling of parts of a machine to the economical and more rapid manufacture of what in old times was made by hand."

In other words, Mr. Taft and the Republican party recognize organization as the spirit of the times. It is nature's own pattern—abhorrence of waste. The doing away with waste and extravagance—the economy of money, time and energy—is a modern business doctrine. The party recognizes the theory of cooperation among laboring men and of capital as vital. Bryan always pretends exact knowledge. Bear in mind that in 1906, when he was the advocate of bimetalhand and without reason, apparently for the purpose of getting their votes.

WHAT IS A TRUST?

Mr. Bryan says: "A trust best can be defined as a corporation which controls so large a proportion of the total quantity of any article used in this country, as to be able to regulate the price and terms of sale."

Bryan says the "Democratic party does not oppose all corporations", but let us see. Suppose a corporation owned and controlled the only diamond mine in the world and that it was in the United States; so that the corporation was "able to regulate the price and terms of sale." That would be a trust, according to Mr. Bryan's definition. Let us suppose that an individual owned the only diamond mine and so was "able to regulate the price and terms of sale." Why would he not be a trust, since Mr. Bryan makes the essential qualification ability "to fix the price and terms of sale"?

Now, as a matter of fact, neither would be a trust. The quantity controlled and the ability to "fix the price and terms of sale", have nothing to do with the definition of a trust. A trust is something imposed on the confidence of another, and the definition applies whether the word is used in the popular sense of designating one of our modern commercial creations, or whether it refers to the old common law trust.

Let us take an example of a trust. Some years ago "bending woods" all over the country were confronted with this problem: they were required to purchase some $30,000 worth of stock, work it up and keep it on hand six months before disposing of it. Then they delivered off on ninety days' time, making nine months from the time they purchased their stock before they realized on it, in the meantime paying the hands and expenses of operating their plants. It spelled ruin for most of them. Then the Standard Gear Wood company was born. One member from each "bending wood" concern became a member of the Standard Gear Wood company, which bought up all the products of every bending concern on ninety days' time, as soon as the product was ready for market, thus reducing the time in which the producing companies realized on their investment from nine to three months. The Standard Gear Wood company sold to the buggy manufacturers, and it was a trust. It also was a monopoly; but it was not organized by rapacious monsters, who were trying to corner the supply of buggy essentials. It was organized by resourceful men, who found themselves confronted with the alternative of ruin or cooperation.

Let us assume that the Standard Oil company, of New Jersey, in its own name owned all the vast properties of the subsidiary corporations that really compose the Standard Oil company. That would not be trust, though none the less a monopoly. But the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Standard Oil company of Ohio, the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the Union Tank Line, the Waters-Pierce Oil company, and the hundreds of other corporations merged into the Standard Oil company through holding concerns and trusteeships, constitute a trust; but they would constitute a trust, if they didn't own an estimable fraction of one per cent of the oil products of the country and didn't cut any figure in the "price or terms of sale".

There is an evil growth apparent; but shall we employ to remove it from our delicate commercial organism, a surgeon who doesn't understand the structure into which he is going to carve and who recklessly confesses the names of diseased portions, that are often identical but never synonymous? Bryan criticizes Taft, because while Taft admits the existence of evils in our commercial system, he does not propose a specific remedy for all the ailments. Does the good engineer would practice reforestation of the watershed at the source of the stream and take scientific steps to prevent the flood by removing its cause; or, recognizing the natural recurrence of the phenomenon, introduce means to carry away the surplus flood with the least variation from normal.

Either the natural and proper tendencies of the times is toward cooperation and combination in the field of labor and of capital, or it is not. If it is natural and proper, then the monopolistic evils should be remedied without obstructing the current of trade. If Mr. Bryan thinks cooperation and combination are altogether wrong in principle, he should propose means to prevent combinations, and not merely interpose an artificial bar after a monopolistic tendency has been followed to the extent of acquiring fifty per cent of the entire quantity of any one product.

Bryan will be defeated. Then we expect him to retire from active efforts to reach the presidency, and devote his time and talents to consistent arraignment of present day evils. Such men as Bryan are able by their genius to swing public opinion behind reforms and force their adoption on political agencies with which the reformer is not in sympathy. Bryan is really great; but his greatness is dimmed by the shallowest demagogism in this campaign.

Bryan says himself: "Why should such a corporation be permitted to sell at one price in one part of the country and at another price in another part? What reason can a corporation have for such discrimination? Prices are not made as a matter of favor; when a big corporation sells to the people of one section at one price and to the people of another section at another price—the cost of transportation, being taken into consideration—there is a reason for it, and the reason in almost every case is to be found in the effort to destroy a competitor."

You Business Man, who does the same thing, can you afford to vote for Bryan? Why does Bryan always use the term corporation? If a man or a firm should sell "to the people of one section at one price and to the people of another section at another price", would it not be just as heinous offense, as that of a corporation doing the same thing for the same purpose?

But, Mr. Bryan again fails to discriminate between right and wrong. When concerns conspire to monopolize a product, and in the course of that conspiracy sell goods below cost in order to drive out a competitor, public policy dictates that the conspiracy should be checked; not because it is inherently immoral to sell below cost—else our retail merchants on Broadway are habitual violators of the moral law—but because the conspiracy, of which the reduction is a part, is against public policy.

Sixteen to one again. Bryan always pretends exact knowledge. Bear in mind that in 1906, he propounded the arbitrary ratio of sixteen to one and clung to it. Now observe his trust remedy: "making a manufacturing or trading corporation engaged in interstate commerce to take out a federal license before it shall be permitted to control as much as 25 percent of the product in which it deals, the license to prohibit the control by such corporation of more than fifty per cent of the total amount."

Every voter should study this proposition until he can clearly see the logic in operation: Bryan with his executive force determining, when a concern is controlling 25 per cent of the product and then compelling it to take out a federal license; the same executive department determining in which to place the purchases, consequently increasing the cost of handling the produce from Marshall. It has competition in Calloway and is forced to bid against the competitor, the price thus being stimulated.

Of course, the charge was dismissed for want of proof; and, of course, Bryan's idea will be rejected by all reasonable men as foolish.

Bryan opposes combinations as wrong, and then condemns the very essence of competition—price cutting and sharp practice—as morally wrong. These great industrial monopolies, of which he talks much, were born in times of the keenest commercial competition, and the rebates and price cutting to which they resorted, were for the purpose of defeating competitors.

BRYAN'S FUTURE.

Nothing will fit Bryan's theories but Socialism, the reduction of all property to common ownership, paternalism in government, and the monopoly of communism. Mr. Bryan's inconsistency apparently results from an effort to harmonize his opinions with his ambition. He is a Socialist at heart, and a Democrat in name. If he lives to a grand old age, we expect him to become the Tolstoy of America, visionary, perhaps, and impractical, but accomplishing a good by his preachers he could never hope to accomplish by executive authority, and winning for himself that undying name, for which he seeks in vain by political preferment. If Bryan would like to harmonize his real views with such a decided tincture of opportunism, he would be an incalculable force in righting existing wrongs.

As it is, the only effect of his success would be the demolition of the Roosevelt school of politics, and the rehabilitation of the reactionary element. His election would be construed as a rebuke to Roosevelt and his policies, nothing more.

There is nothing historically Democratic in Bryan's ideas or platform. Democracy has always stood for state sovereignty. The platform of 1908 says that it does not intend to restrict the authority of the state, and then goes on to provide for federal licenses for certain cases and federal control of certain corporations. It looks suspicious that Bryan found it necessary to inform anybody that his intention was not to abridge the authority of the states, especially when in the same sentence the authority of the federal government in that particular was extended.

Bryan has expressed himself in favor of government ownership of railroads, although relegating the issue to the future, while declaring specifically in favor of the greatest scope for individual action. His platform denounces the administration for spending much money, and without advocating a single retrenchment, demands a physical valuation of railroad property. It advocates another navy for the Pacific, that would cost billions. Even the platform denounces militarism in round terms.

Bryan will be defeated. Then we expect him to retire from active efforts to reach the presidency, and devote his time and talents to consistent arraignment of present day evils. Such men as Bryan are able by their genius to swing public opinion behind reforms and force their adoption on political agencies with which the reformer is not in sympathy. Bryan is really great; but his greatness is dimmed by the shallowest demagogism in this campaign.

Bryan says himself: "Why should such a corporation be permitted to sell at one price in one part of the country and at another price in another part? What reason can a corporation have for such discrimination? Prices are not made as a matter of favor; when a big corporation sells to the people of one section at one price and to the people of another section at another price—the cost of transportation, being taken into consideration—there is a reason for it, and the reason in almost every case is to be found in the effort to destroy a competitor."

If a man or a firm should sell "to the people of one section at one price and to the people of another section at another price", would it not be just as heinous offense, as that of a corporation doing the same thing for the same purpose?

The man breathed hard over it for several minutes.

"Yes. It would be easy." And he nodded his head several times as he named the railroad stations nearest the point indicated by Armitage. The place was in one of the mountainous counties of Virginia, fifteen miles from an east and west railway line. Armitage opened a duly recorded deed which conveyed to himself the title to 2,000 acres of land; also a curiously complicated abstract of title showing the successive transfers of ownership from colonial days down through the years of Virginia's splendor to the dread time when battle shook the world. The title had passed from the time cut-throat competitive system, which denounces every man, who cuts the price in one territory where he has a competitor, and holds it up in a territory where he has the trade to himself.

A Paducah produce concern was located in Calloway county on the very ground, which Bryan assumes. A Calloway buyer alleged that the Paducah concern and Armour conspired to drive him out of the trade by paying prices for produce that could afford to pay, and cited as substantiation the fact that the same concern paid less for produce in Marshall county. The concern has no competition in Marshall, and has no store in which to place the purchases, consequently increasing the cost of handling the produce from Marshall. It has competition in Calloway and is forced to bid against the competitor, the price thus being stimulated.

Of course, the charge was dismissed for want of proof; and, of course, Bryan's idea will be rejected by all reasonable men as foolish.

These great industrial monopolies, of which he talks much, were born in times of the keenest commercial competition, and the rebates and price cutting to which they resorted, were for the purpose of defeating competitors.

"Oscar!" he said, and repeated very softly, "Oscar!"

The man was deeply moved, and tears sprang into his eyes. Armitage laughed, holding him at arm's length.

"None of that nonsense! Sit down!" He turned to the door, opened it and peered into the hall, locked the door again, then motioned the man to a chair.

"So you deserted your mother country, did you, and have borne arms for the glorious republic?"

"I served in the Philippines—yes."

"Rank, titles, emoluments, Oscar?"

"I was a sergeant, and the surgeon could not find the bullet after Big Bend, Luzon, so they were sorry and gave me a certificate and $2 a month to my pay," said the man so succinctly and colorlessly that Armitage laughed.

"You have done well, Oscar; honor me by acco... just a cigar."

The man took a cigar from the box which Armitage extended, but would not light it. He held it rather absent-mindedly in his hand and continued to smoke.

"You are not dead—Mr. Armitage, your father?"

"My father is dead, Oscar."

"He was a good man," said the soldier.

"Yes; he was a good man," repeated Armitage gravely. "I am alive, and yet I am dead. Oscar, do you grasp the idea? You were a good friend when we were lads together in the great forest. If I should want you to help me now—"

The man jumped to his feet and stood at attention.

Fourth Testimonial Recital.

The program for the Fourth Gilber-Reddick testimonial organ recital at the First Christian church, tomorrow evening, is an especially attractive one, and will doubtless receive the same flattering reception accorded the previous programs of the series. Mr. Reddick will be the organist and will be assisted by Miss Mayme Dreyfus, contralto. That carefully arranged and artistically rendered programs of this character may do much in the musical upliftment of any community, cannot be gainsaid, and the increasing interest in the present recitals, upon the part of Paducah music lovers, is most gratifying to all who have the musical betterment of their city at heart.

Tomorrow evening's recital will be Mr. Reddick's last, as he will leave Monday for Cincinnati, to continue his musical studies at the College of Music. The program will begin at 8:30 o'clock and the general public is cordially invited to attend. No admission is charged, but a free will offering is made and tendered the organists. A log chain with a mammoth cowbell attached was fastened about his neck, the key to save a penny.

BIG CONFERENCE AT DES MOINES

Nearly 1,000 Republicans Meet to Alleviate Strife.

Cummins Issues Order for Special Session to Provide for Election of Senator.

EFFORTS ARE SUCCESSFUL

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 26.—Nearly a thousand Republicans were in conference here in an effort to alleviate the factional strife which has torn the party during the past few years and which was believed by many to menace the success of the Republican ticket in this state. The feature of the occasion was Governor Cummins' announcement that he had decided to call a special session of the legislature to dispose of the senatorial matter which since the death of Allison has threatened to renew the old fight. This special session will be asked to amend the state primary law to permit the Republican voters to select a senatorial successor at the regular election in November instead of leaving it to a legislative caucus.

In the conference opposition was expressed to such proceedings, but Cummins' announcement settled the matter and the decision was generally accepted in good spirit, the understanding being that the law be so amended that only Republican voters could participate in the selection of a Republican senatorial candidate.

Many party leaders were present and most of the members of the Iowa delegation in congress. Senator Dooliver was one of the speakers, accepting the decision of the governor in good part and declaring himself unequivocally for a harmony program. George D. Perkins, editor of the Sioux City Journal, a bitter opponent of Cummins, and John F. Lacey were also among the speakers declaring for harmony.

Lacey once or twice stirred up a little disagreeable sentiment by his references to the last fight. Cummins spoke at some length, explaining that his reason for asking that the senatorship be submitted to the primary election was that it would make possible the election of all Republican legislative candidates and provide for an unbiased expression of the voters on the matter. State Auditor Carroll, Republican nominee for governor, was also one of the speakers.

The conference was held under the auspices of the state central committee and it is generally believed here to have been productive of good in bringing the factions together for a united fight for the entire Republican ticket.

Issues Proclamation.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 26.—Governor Cummins issued a proclamation for a special session of the legislature to amend the primary law, fixing August 31 as the day for convening. The proclamation sets forth so large that it required three stiches to sew it up. She had other severe bruises on the arm and shoulders. The Moody child is suffering with severe bruises, but is not lacerated as badly as the former.

It also specified that the legislature is convened to amend the present primary law to make such a choice possible for an expression of choice between the candidate for United States senator at the general election in November when the choice of any political party becomes unavailable at the regular June primary through death or otherwise.

TEMPLE AS RESTAURANT

Mexican House of Worship at Museum of Natural History.

The interior of a temple used for religious ceremonies about 4,000 years ago by a Mexican tribe has been reproduced in the basement of the American Museum of Natural History and will be opened in about a month as a public restaurant. The work was done by Dr. D. Figgins, of the department of preparation and exhibition, under the direction of Dr. Harmon C. Bumpus, the director.

The temple which has been copied was one of the ruins of Mitla, in Oaxaca, Mex., the masonry of which was of superior order. The mural decorations were purely geometric and in marked contrast with the mythological life-form designs found in other sections of Mexico. The tablets over the doors were carved in stone, and the panels were mosaic work made out of small pieces of stone set in with an extremely fine jointure. Three rooms have been reproduced, says the New York Tribune; one about thirty-two feet square, and the other thirty-two feet long, eight feet wide and twelve feet high. The decorations of the largest room were originally formed by more than 100,000 separate pieces of close-grained lava resembling coarse grain sandstone. Each piece fitted the other with such exactness that they locked together without the use of cement. The work of these Mexican Indians was done with tools of flint. These decorations have been exactly reproduced in the museum, so far as the outward appearances and color are concerned, by the uses of cement and plaster.

Mr. Figgins said that the restaurant would be fitted up with the old-style Mexican furniture and that there was talk of having only Mexican dishes served by waitresses in Mexican costumes.

SOLDIERS PLAY

BASEBALL IN DAYTIME AND ON GUARD DUTY AT NIGHT.

Two Privates Come Up From Birmingham and Get Supplies of Sporting Goods.

Doing guard duty at night and playing baseball during spare hours of the day is the routine of life for many of the soldiers that are on duty in the night rider territory. Private Barber and Richards, whose company is stationed at Birmingham, came to Paducah yesterday afternoon and made purchases to supply the soldiers with baseball goods. When the soldier boys left they had gloves and baseball bats; their big pistols swinging at their belts were hidden by the bundles. The state soldiers find their only recreation in playing baseball, although the camp monotony is broken occasionally with a skirmish with raiders. The soldiers are good ball trossers and the privates said they had beaten every ball team in the vicinity of Birmingham.

BULL DOGS ON WAR PATH.

Bite Children and Attack a Policeman.

Clarksville, Tenn., Aug. 26.—Two little girls were attacked by two bull dogs and bitten in several places. Mrs. Kate Chadoin, of Hopkinsville, and Miss Ruth Moody, accompanied by two little girls, Topsy Moody and Endora Chadoin, aged 10 and 8 years, started down to the river for the purpose of gathering shells. After going down the steps at the Tennessee Central freight depot the two little girls ran ahead and when passing the office of M. H. Clark & Brother, two bull-dogs belonging to Napoleon Dabney, a negro mail carrier, who lives in the lot adjoining, ran out of Dabney's yard and attacked the children, lacerating the flesh, and one was attempting to drag one of the children into the yard.

Mrs. Chadoin by striking with an umbrella finally succeeded in driving the dogs away, but not until each child was severely bitten. The Chadoin child had a gash torn in one arm so large that it required three stitches to sew it up. She had other severe bruises on the arm and shoulders. The Moody child is suffering with severe bruises, but is not lacerated as badly as the former.

Policeman Fowlkes went after the dogs and when he entered the yard they started toward him, when he shot one of them. The dogs then turned and ran under a house. After considerable trouble they were located and killed with a shotgun.

A Country of Tips.

It is supposed by travelers that the tipping system is universal. A Toronto man who visited England last summer appears to think that country is the champion tip-taker, and he relates some of his experiences.

"Well, I had tipped every man, from the swell gent who seemed to own the house of commons down to the hirer who gummed the wrong label on my luggage, and I went into the waiting room on the landing stage at Liverpool to wash my hands of everything English, and what do you think stared me in the face when I had finished?" A placard saying, "Please tip the basin!"

HERE IS THE LIMIT ON SNAKE STORIES: GET READY FOR IT

Reptile Killed and Found to Contain Two Rabbits and a Cast Iron Frog Weighing Four Pounds.

Harrisburg, Pa.—John Wax had a large cast iron frog, weighing four pounds, painted green, which he used to hold the door open. Monday the frog disappeared.

Yesterday James Blitline was plowing near Wax's farm when he discovered a black snake, seven feet long.

He killed it and noticing it to be abnormal about the body, held a post-mortem, resulting in finding two half-grown rabbits and Mr. Wax's cast iron frog.

An anecdote is told of Chief Justice John Marshall. Returning one afternoon from his farm near Richmond, to his home in that city, the hub of his wheel caught on a small sapling growing by the roadside. After striving unsuccessfully for some moments to extricate the wheel, he heard the sound of an axe in the woods and saw a negro man approaching. Hailing him, he said, "If you will get that axe and cut down this tree, I'll give you a dollar." "I can't get it by 'thought no axe, dat's all yer want." "Yes, that's all," said the judge. The man simply backed the horse until the wheel was clear of the sapling, and then brought the vehicle safely around it. "You don't charge a dollar for that, do you?" asked the astonished chief justice. "No, massa; but it wuz a dollar to turn some folks sense." The darkey got his dollar without further questioning.

It was about six months that Dr. Sydney Deane had been a medical practitioner in the city of New York, and he had not earned 10 per cent of his expenses, which were very moderate.

He was a throat specialist, but his earnings thus far had come from his own throat and not from the throats of his patients. He had supported himself since his youth and had paid for an expensive professional education by singing. I have heard good judges say that Deane might have taken rank among the few great tenors of the time and have made money by the bushel, but he disliked singing for pay, and he especially, fervently, fanatically, disliked notoriety, anything whatever that could be called advertising. He had sung chiefly in church choirs and very select concertos and had marvelously succeeded in concealing the fact that he was one of the favorite children of Apollo.

Upon his return from Germany he went to his native town of Eddington, in Connecticut, where he remained three years. He got a few patients, but his salary as tenor in a New Haven church choir constituted more than half his income.

The Kendalls were among the few people in Eddington who had any money, but they never had throat troubles. These seemed to occur among the poor only. Elsa Kendall was called the prettiest girl in the town, and she was the heiress also. To pay court to her was perhaps the only worldly wise thing that Sydney Deane did in his three years' residence in Eddington, but Elsa Kendall grew from eighteen to twenty-one, seeing Deane almost daily except for her own brief absences from the town, and she never knew the nature of his sentiments toward her.

In the early days she fancied herself in love with him. Then she was his friend, adoring only his voice, and at last she came to despise him just a little as a weak man, finical in his devotion to the proprieties and incapable of dealing with the world. Relentlessly she forced Deane into the battle. It was her energy that propelled him into the larger field. When he was gone she missed him very much and shed some tears.

In New York Deane made some very nice acquaintances among the doctors, but got no patients.

Deane's stock of money began to run low. His voice was earning him nothing except the admiration of his neighbors and of the wayfarers who paused outside his windows, but he felt that the day was at hand when he must sing for hire. This thought was a thorn in his flesh, and there was another that was even sharper. He had neglected one of Elsa's most urgent admonitions. Worse, he was deceiving her about it. "Look up my uncle, Dr. Kendall, the very first thing," she had said to him. "He will help you."

Deane had "looked him up," as the phrase is understood in New York, and had not been satisfied with the result.

"Well, my young friend," said Kendall when the patient and her patron had departed, "what do you think of the case?"

"I have seen a precisely similar condition," he replied, "resulting from extreme personal susceptibility to the perfume of certain flowers—in that case, white lilacs. The only thing that bothers me is that Miss Winthrop denies having been subjected to any such influence. And a singer of Mine, Sylvestre's experience must be well aware of the danger of perfumes. In a case of this kind she'd suspect flowers instantly if any were about. In fact, Miss Winthrop says that Mine, Sylvestre asked her at once about it, but up to that time, singularly enough, Miss Winthrop had never heard that odors were dangerous. At least she had never paid any attention to the matter."

"And you conclude?" said Kendall, smiling.

"Miss Winthrop does not impress me as perfectly frank," responded Deane. "If I could believe that there was a secret romance, that some suitor not favored by Mine, Sylvestre had sent flowers on the sly to Miss Winthrop, I'd feel that I was on safe ground. Flowers sent as a love token are pressed against the face; their perfume is inhaled deeply. That would account for the severity and persistence of this case."

Kendall rose and took Deane's hand warmly. Still holding it, he led Deane to a closet, which he opened. Upon a shelf was a cubical pasteboard box. Kendall lifted the cover and disclosed a withered bouquet of violets.

"There's the little joker," he said. "Mine, Sylvestre's maid got it for me day before yesterday. Mine, Sylvestre doesn't know anything about it. Miss Winthrop knows that I have these things, but of course she wouldn't tell you in Mine, Sylvestre's presence. The secret suitor is a little Frenchman who was on the steamer with them coming over. He went back yesterday. I'm happy to say. I hope you'll excuse me for making a mystery of this, Dr. Deane. I had a curiosity to see you work on it. You're all right."

"But you told Mr. Richards that the case was very obscure?"

"That's all right," laughed Kendall.

"I'm saving the violets for another story."

On the following afternoon a very elegant automobile stopped before Deane's door. He could not suppose that the occupants had come to see him as he watched them alight, but they had. They were a mother and daughter, and the former introduced the conversation by saying that she had read an article in a morning paper about a Miss Winthrop.

"I think it must be very much like my daughter's case," she said.

In reality there was no similarity, but the daughter was an excellent patient nevertheless. She had no sooner gone away than another lady came from directly across the street. She had not seen the article in the newspaper, but she had seen the automobile, and it had encouraged her.

At this point a card was brought to Dr. Kendall, who gave orders that the visitor should be admitted. Deane rose as if to go, but Kendall checked him instantly.

"I want to call you in consultation on this case," he said. "You'll see a wonderful throat in a rather odd condition."

It was an invitation that could not be declined. Deane signified his acquiescence and glanced toward the door.

To his surprise there entered a man of about thirty, a pleasant looking fellow, nicely dressed and with an air of cultivation. Dr. Kendall introduced him at once as Mr. Richards, "whose writings on music and kindred topics are read by everybody." In recognition of this praise Richards glanced at Deane, with a smile, and said, "I'm a reporter."

"I have called Dr. Deane in consultation on the case of Miss Winthrop," said Kendall, and he gave Deane's address, which Richards jotted down.

"He is a recognized authority on diseases of the vocal chords and is widely known both here and abroad as the author of"— And he rattled off with perfect accuracy the titles of a half dozen of Deane's contributions to medical publications.

Deane observed, with alarm, that Richards was writing shorthand in his notebook.

"Now, as to this case of Miss Winthrop," continued Kendall. "It is a matter of considerable public interest, and I have her permission to speak freely. She has suffered an almost total loss of voice. This is the condition."

He proceeded to describe in popular language a condition of congestion and paroxysms of the larynx, with spasm of the bronchial tube. He took a leaf from Richards' notebook and drew a diagram. Nothing that he said indicated to Deane's instructed mind that there was anything unusual in the case, except the failure of treatment to relieve it, but it was all so tantalizingly expressed and with such a hearty, fatherly sympathy for the young woman in her affliction that Deane could not deny its merit as a good story.

At the close of the narrative Miss Winthrop and her patron arrived.

Miss Winthrop was a quiet mannered, pretty girl, with dark, dreamy eyes and a singularly white skin, subject to peculiarly rapid and beautiful play of color in accord with her emotions. She was obviously consumed by anxiety as to her voice, and her eyes filled with tears when she tried to speak of it.

Deane's "Interview" was furnished by Mine, Sylvestre, and it was a gem of sparkling cleverness.

When Richards had gone Dr. Kendall devoted himself to his patient, with Deane as his colleague, but the younger physician speedily perceived a shifting of the responsibility to his own shoulders. The puzzle of the case lay in the cause of the trouble. Its history disclosed no reason for the affliction. Miss Winthrop was in perfect health except for the local condition, which seemed to be the result of some malign enchantment. Deane was expected to solve this riddle. He was put upon his metal.

"Well, my young friend," said Kendall when the patient and her patron had departed, "what do you think of the case?"

"I have seen a precisely similar condition," he replied, "resulting from extreme personal susceptibility to the perfume of certain flowers—in that case, white lilacs. The only thing that bothers me is that Miss Winthrop denies having been subjected to any such influence. And a singer of Mine, Sylvestre's experience must be well aware of the danger of perfumes. AN AFFECTING OCCURRENCE

New York, Aug. 26.—That there are in existence a number of letters exchanged by William E. Annis and Claudia Hains, wife of the man who killed him, and that these letters will be an important factor in Hains' defense are facts made public for the first time.

Attorney John F. McIntyre, counsel for Captain Hains, Jr., and his brother, Thornton Jenkins Hains, said that the letters would take rank with Mrs. Hains' confession when the men were placed on trial.

"And I have no doubt that, by means of the confession and this correspondence, I shall be able to clear both men," he asserted.

"Are there many letters?" he was asked.

"I don't want to discuss the subject that fully," was the reply.

"Are they now in your possession?"

"They are accessible at any moment for the defense."

Further than this Mr. McIntyre would not go, but he laid great stress on the importance of the letters and their value in court. It was predicted by friends of both Captain and Mrs. Hains that they would be reconciled before the end of this week. Efforts are being made to hasten their meeting, and their friends said they would not be surprised if Mrs. Hains visited her husband in his cell within a couple of days.

Captain Hains and Thornton Hains were before Magistrate Gilroy in the Long Island City court. The captain had donned his full uniform because his leave of absence expired, and although he is detained by the civil authorities, he also occupies the position of an army officer "on duty."

The hearing was postponed until next Friday by agreement of attorneys for both sides. As Captain Hains and his brother were taken from the building on the way back to jail an affecting scene took place between the soldier prisoner and his chief counselor, John F. McIntyre.

KENTUCKY SYNOD

COLORED CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN SESSION

Meets Here and Elects Mayfield Minister Moderator—Many in Attendance.

The Kentucky synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, colored, began its annual session with the Paducah congregation last night with a large number of ministers in attendance. The Rev. W. L. Clark, D. D., who was moderator of the synod for many years, died since the last meeting and by appointment of the clerk,

Dr. J. J. Simpson, the opening sermon was preached by the Rev. G. W. Givens, who took as his text "Jesus the Way," from John 14:16. Dr. Simpson then announced the synod open for business, and after prayer by the Rev. R. Todd, the Rev. M. S. McCauley, of Mayfield, was elected moderator. The Rev. McCauley, in thanking the synod for the honor, spoke feelingly of the life and work of Dr. Clark, his predecessor. He also made a strong appeal for support of the synod in its educational and missionary work.

The synod will be in session until Thursday when a state Sunday school convention will be organized and continue in session over Sunday.

The Rev. C. G. Rowlett is pastor of the Paducah church, and under his ministration the church has made a wonderful progress.
